“Managing Workers’ Compensation Injuries and Costs”
Presented by the North American Transportation Management Institute
Indirect expenses such as lost productivity and retraining make up 80% of costs associated with workers’ compensation. Employee injuries and associated workers’ compensation costs are a management problem—not an insurance problem, not an employee problem, and not a fraud problem. With proper management, injuries and workers’ compensation costs can be controlled.

This seminar is designed to help trucking companies reduce their injury rate and workers’ compensation costs. Experts familiar with workers’ compensation and the trucking industry will teach you how to:
- Design an injury prevention program
- Manage internal and external claims processing
- Start benchmarking your company against industry leaders
- Spot fraud before it occurs
- Use our checklists and formats to assess your program

(Note: Managing Workers’ Compensation Injuries and Costs requires a separate registration and payment of fee directly to NATMI. Please use the NATMI registration form in this brochure to register for the course, and return directly to NATMI.)
